To further enhance the experience, power ratings of players are recalibrated with increased emphasis on playing styles, ball control and movement, as well as technical skills and awareness. Training also sees a new 'My Style' feature, which enables players to select their preferred playing style and customise training sessions based on their real-world strengths. New Master League feature re-balances the playing field by introducing new rules and player attributes. A key change sees the introduction of a three-man referee crew – the first time in FIFA's history that referees are now left- and right-sided – which will better reflect the new position of defender and forward, and should bring the match into greater focus for the player. There are also new and improved foul appeals, free-kicks and a new red card rule. FIFA 22 will be available in stores for Xbox 360, PlayStation 3, Wii U, Xbox One, PlayStation 4 and PC on September 15th. You can learn more about the game on these platforms by watching the trailers below, or by clicking here for details of where to pre-order.
