Most of the neuroendocrine tumors (NETs) of the alimentary tract origin from enterochromaffin cells (ECL), which represent a subtype of L cells. We have studied the expression of cytokeratin (CK) A and CK 18 proteins, neuroendocrine antigens (NSE, PNSE, EPN, GLU and different markers of neuroendocrine differentiation) as well as bcl-2 in the formation of neuroendocrine tumors of the stomach (G-NET). ECL (40.5%) and alfa-cells (6.0%) were detected in the normal stomach. A high proliferative activity of ECL was recorded. Tumors with malignant histopathology revealed a high proliferative activity of ECL as well as the expression of cytokeratins and antigens. ECL was immunonegative for the neuroendocrine proteins. A large group of tumors did not reveal the above-mentioned markers of neuroendocrine differentiation. In the first group (intestinal type G-NET) high proliferative activity of ECL and large amounts of the cytokeratins were found; the tumor cells lacked the expression of neuroendocrine proteins. In the second group (diffuse type G-NET) an abundant distribution of neuroendocrine markers was observed. In the third group (spindle-cell type G-NET) only a moderate expression of the cytokeratins was observed and no expression of neuroendocrine proteins. get a comprehensive insurance policy.
