FCC Comcast Corp. v. FCC, 580 U.S. ___ (2018), was a United States Supreme Court case decided on January 18, 2018. The Supreme Court held that the Federal Communications Commission's current Net Neutrality rules violate the First Amendment, granted petitioners several requests for writs of certiorari, and remanded the case back to the United States Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit to reconsider it in light of the Constitution's free speech clause. Background The case involved an appeal by the Cable Television and Home Entertainment Association (Cable TV) on behalf of Comcast's customers about the regulations the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) had implemented and enforced for the first time since reclassification in 2005. The regulations had been previously enforced by the FCC for mobile communication providers, but were partially overturned as a result of the court-ordered vacating of the net neutrality rules in December 2015. In 2016, the FCC passed new net neutrality regulations, but Comcast sought to reopen the 2014 order and its vacating of the rules in 2015. In April 2016, Comcast settled with the FCC to allow them to enforce net neutrality
