Different lineages of lymphocytes can be identified by surface markers and functional immunologic tests. Recent studies have shown that functional cooperation between lymphocyte subpopulations, particularly T and B lymphocytes, is important in certain immune responses. The aim of this study was to evaluate the functional characteristics of T and B lymphocytes in patients with autoimmune thyroid diseases (AITD) and to examine their correlation with the clinical features. We studied T and B lymphocyte subsets in the peripheral blood of patients with AITD (n=20) and in normal controls (n=22), using flow cytometry and ELISPOT assay for analysis of cytokine production. The results showed that the percentage of total T lymphocytes and CD4+ T cells was significantly increased in the group with AITD and that the percentage of IgG Fc receptors+ cells (but not IgE Fc receptors+ cells) on mononuclear cells was significantly decreased in the group with AITD. Although the secretion of IFN-gamma, IL-4 and IL-6 by stimulated
